PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA CIRCUIT

Petitioner prays that a writ of certiorari issue to review the judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit entered on May 11, 1961, enforcing compliance with an administrative subpoena issued pursuant to Section 601 of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, 73 Stat. 529, 29 U.S.C. 521.

OPINIONS BELOW

The Memorandum of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia and the Opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit are printed in the appendix to this petition. App. 1a-42a. Neither is yet officially reported.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the Court of Appeals was entered on May 11, 1962. App. 12a. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U.S.C. 1254(1).

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the Secretary of Labor, under Section 601 of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, 73 Stat. 539, 29 U.S.C. 521, is empowered to subpoena all of the financial records of an international labor organization with a membership of over a million and one-half persons motivated solely by administrative curiosity.

2. Whether the Congress has the constitutional power to regulate, and require reporting of, those internal affairs of a labor organization which are wholly unrelated to its collective bargaining activities.

3. Whether the Secretary of Labor, under Section 601 of the Act, can require the production of records which, under Section 206 of the same Act, 73 Stat. 529, 29 U.S.C. 436, the Petitioner is not required to maintain.

CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISION AND STATUTES INVOLVED

The United States Constitution, Article I, Section 8, provides pertinently:

> "The Congress shall have Power . . . To regulate Commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian Tribes."

Section 201 of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, 73 Stat. 534, 29 U.S.C. 431, provides as follows:

> "(a) Every labor organization shall adopt a constitution and bylaws and shall file a copy thereof with the Secretary, together with a report, signed by its president and secretary or corresponding principal officers, containing the following information—
> (1) the name of the labor organization, its mailing address, and any other address at which it maintains its principal office or at which it keeps the records referred to in this title;
> (2) the name and title of each of its officers;
> (3) the initiation fee or fees required from a new or transferred member and fees for work permits required by the reporting labor organization;
> (4) the regular dues or fees or other periodic payments required to remain a member of the reporting labor organization; and
> (5) detailed statements, or references to specific provisions of documents filed under this subsection which contain such statements, showing the provision made and procedures followed with respect to each of the following: (A) qualifications for or restrictions on membership, (B) levying of assessments, (C) participation in insurance or other benefit plans, (D) authorization for disbursement of funds of the labor organization, (E) audit of financial transactions of the labor organization, (F) the calling of regular and special meetings, (G) the selection of officers and stewards and of any representatives to other bodies composed of labor organizations' representatives, with a specific statement of the manner in which each officer was elected, appointed, or otherwise selected, (H) discipline or removal of officers or agents for breaches of their trust, (I) impositions of fines, suspensions, and expulsions of members, including the grounds for such action and any provision made for notice, hearing, judgment on the evidence, and appeal procedures, (J) authorization for bargaining demands, (K) ratification of contract terms, (L) authorization for strikes, and (M) issuance of work permits. Any change in the information required by this subsection shall be reported to the Secretary at the time the reporting labor organization files with the Secretary the annual financial report required by subsection (b).

(b) Every labor organization shall file annually with the Secretary a financial report signed by its president and treasurer or corresponding principal officers containing the following information in such detail as may be necessary accurately to disclose its financial condition and operations for its preceding fiscal year—

(1) assets and liabilities at the beginning and end of the fiscal year;

(2) receipts of any kind and the sources thereof;

(3) salary, allowances, and other direct or indirect disbursements (including reimbursed expenses) to each officer and also to each employee who, during such fiscal year, received more than $10,000 in the aggregate from such labor organization and any other labor organization affiliated with it or with which it is affiliated, or which is affiliated with the same national or international labor organization;

(4) direct and indirect loans made to any officer, employee, or member, which aggregated more than $250 during the fiscal year, together with a statement of the purpose, security, if any, and arrangements for repayment;

(5) direct and indirect loans to any business enterprise, together with a statement of the purpose, security, if any, and arrangements for repayment; and

(6) other disbursements made by it including the purposes thereof; all in such categories as the Secretary may prescribe.

(c) Every labor organization required to submit a report under this title shall make available the information required to be contained in such report to all of its members, and every such labor organization and its officers shall be under a duty enforceable at the suit of any member of such organization in any State court of competent jurisdiction or in the district court of the United States for the district in which such labor organization maintains its principal office, to permit such member for just cause to examine any books, records, and accounts necessary to verify such report. The court in such action may, in its discretion, in addition to any judgment awarded to the plaintiff or plaintiffs, allow a reasonable attorney's fee to be paid by the defendant and costs of the action."

Section 206 of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, 73 Stat. 529, 29 U.S.C. 436, provides as follows:

"Every person required to file any report under this title shall maintain records on the matters required to be reported which will provide in sufficient detail the necessary basic information and data from which the documents filed with the Secretary may be verified, explained or clarified, and checked for accuracy and completeness, and shall include vouchers, worksheets, receipts, and applicable resolutions, and shall keep such records available for examination for a period of not less than five years after the filing of the documents based on the information which they contain."

Section 207 of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, 73 Stat. 529, 29 U.S.C. 437, provides as follows:

"(a) Each labor organization shall file the initial report required under section 201(a) within ninety days after the date on which it first becomes subject to this Act.

(b) Each person required to file a report under section 201(b), 202, 203(a), or the second sentence of 203(b) shall file such report within ninety days after the end of each of its fiscal years; except that where such person is subject to section 201(b), 202, 203(a), or the second sentence of 203(b), as the case may be, for only a portion of such a fiscal year (because the date of enactment of this Act occurs during such person's fiscal year or such person becomes subject to this Act during its fiscal year) such person may consider that portion as the entire fiscal year in making such report."

Section 601 of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, 73 Stat. 539, 29 U.S.C. 521, provides as follows:

"(a) The Secretary shall have power when he believes it necessary in order to determine whether any person has violated or is about to violate any provision of this Act (except title I or amendments made by this Act to other statutes) to make an investigation and in connection therewith he may enter such places and inspect such records and accounts and question such persons as he may deem necessary to enable him to determine the facts relative thereto. The Secretary may report to interested persons or officials concerning the facts required to be shown in any report required by this Act and concerning the reasons for failure or refusal to file such a report or any other matter which he deems to be appropriate as a result of such an investigation.

(b) For the purpose of any investigation provided for in this Act, the provisions of sections 9 and 10 (relating to the attendance of witnesses and the production of books, papers, and documents) of the Federal Trade Commission Act of September 26, 1914, as amended (15 U.S.C. 49, 50), are hereby made applicable to the jurisdiction, powers, and duties of the Secretary or any officers designated by him.

Section 9 of the Federal Trade Commission Act of 1914, 38 Stat. 722, 15 U.S.C. 49, provides as follows:

"That for the purposes of this Act the commission, or its duly authorized agent or agents, shall at all reasonable times have access to, for the purpose of examination, and the right to copy any documentary evidence of any corporation being investigated or proceeded against; and the commission shall have power to require by subpoena the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of all such documentary evidence relating to any matter under investigation. Any member of the commission may sign subpoenas, and members and examiners of the commission may administer oaths and affirmations, examine witnesses, and receive evidence.

"Such attendance of witnesses, and the production of such documentary evidence, may be required from any place in the United States, at any designated place of hearing. And in case of disobedience to a subpoena the commission may invoke the aid of any court of the United States in requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of documentary evidence.

"Any of the district courts of the United States within the jurisdiction of which such inquiry is carried on may, in case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpoena issued to any corporation or other person, issue an order requiring such corporation or other person to appear before the commission, or to produce documentary evidence if so ordered, or to give evidence touching the matter in question; and any failure to obey such an order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof.

"Upon the application of the Attorney General of the United States, at the request of the commission, the district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus commanding any person or corporation to comply with the provisions of this Act or any order of the commission made in pursuance thereof.

"The Commission may order testimony to be taken by deposition in any proceeding or investigation pending under this Act at any stage of such proceeding or investigation. Such depositions may be taken before any person designated by the commission and having power to administer oaths. Such testimony shall be reduced to writing by the person taking the deposition, or under his direction, and shall then be subscribed by the deponent. Any person may be compelled to appear and depose and to produce documentary evidence in the same manner as witnesses may be compelled to appear and testify and produce documentary evidence before the commission as hereinbefore provided.

"Witnesses summoned before the Commission shall be paid the same fees and mileage that are paid witnesses in the courts of the United States, and witnesses whose depositions are taken, and the persons taking the same shall severally be entitled to the same fees as are paid for like services in the courts of the United States."

Section 10 of the Federal Trade Commission Act of 1914, 38 Stat. 723, 15 U.S.C. 50, provides as follows:

"That any person who shall neglect or refuse to attend and testify, or to answer any lawful inquiry, or to produce documentary evidence, if in his power to do so, in obedience to the subpoena or lawful requirement of the commission, shall be guilty of an offense and upon conviction thereof by a court of competent jurisdiction shall be punished by a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000, or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

"Any person who shall willfully make or cause to be made, any false entry or statement of fact in any report required to be made under this Act, or who shall willfully make, or cause to be made, any false entry in any account, record, or memorandum kept by any corporation subject to this Act, or who shall willfully neglect or fail to make, or cause to be made, full, true, and correct entries in such accounts, records, or memoranda of all facts and transactions appertaining to the business of such corporation, or who shall willfully remove out of the jurisdiction of the United States, or willfully mutilate, alter, or by any other means falsify any documentary evidence of such corporation, or who shall willfully refuse to submit to the commission or to any of its authorized agents, for the purpose of inspection and taking copies, any documentary evidence of such corporation in his possession or within his control, shall be deemed guilty of an offense against the United States, and shall be subject, upon conviction in any court of the United States of competent jurisdiction, to a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000 or to imprisonment for a term of not more than three years, or to both such fine and imprisonment.

"If any corporation required by this Act to file any annual or special report shall fail so to do within the time fixed by the commission for filing the same and such failure shall continue for thirty days after notice of such default, the corporation shall forfeit to the United States the sum of $100 for each and every day of the continuance of such failure, which forfeiture shall be payable into the Treasury of the United States, and shall be recoverable in a civil suit in the name of the United States brought in the district where the corporation has its principal office or in any district in which it shall do business. It shall be the duty of the various district attorneys, under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States, to prosecute for the recovery of forfeitures. The costs and expenses of such prosecution shall be paid out of the appropriation for the expenses of the courts of the United States.

"Any officer or employee of the commission who shall make public any information obtained by the commission without its authority, unless directed by a court, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court."

STATEMENT

Pursuant to the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, 73 Stat. 539 et seq., 29 U.S.C. 401 et seq., which became effective on September 14, 1959, the more than 78,000 labor organizations in the United States are required to file detailed organizational reports and periodic financial reports. Petitioner has filed all such required reports.

Relying upon Section 601 of the Act, 73 Stat. 539, 29 U.S.C. 521, and acting through his designee, the Commissioner of the Bureau of Labor-Management Reports, the Secretary of Labor, on May 10, 1961, issued a subpoena duces tecum to the Petitioner which effectively constituted a complete seizure of its books and records for a 22 month period. The exact language of the subpoena was as follows (R. 9-10):[1]

"UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The Petitioner declined voluntary compliance with a subpoena of such breadth (R. 11-13) and the Secretary secured an Order from the United States District Court for the District of Columbia requiring the Petitioner to show cause why the subpoena should not be enforced. (R. 3). During the course of argument in the District Court, it became clear that the sole basis for the issuance of the subpoena in question was administrative curiosity. Counsel for the Secretary made that candid statement during the following colloquy:

"The Court: Yes, but as a consequence of the information filed [by the Petitioner] and where the statute says the Secretary shall have the power, when he believes it necessary, to determine whether any person has violated or is about to violate any provision of this Chapter—in other words, an examination of the reports by the Secretary might lead him to conclude that there has been a violation of the statute.

"Mr. MacGuineas: No.

"The Court: Or that the statute has been violated.

"Mr. MacGuineas: No. The question the Secretary has in mind is: Are these reports which the Union has filed in all respects accurate and correct.

"The Court: And nothing in the nature of a criminal proceeding?

"Mr. MacGuineas: No, not at all, Your Honor.

* * * * * * *

"The Court: And that is what you say, presumably, is involved here, a curiosity?

"Mr. MacGuineas: The Secretary is curious, exactly." (R. 16-17).

After argument, the District Court withheld disposition to await the outcome of the Secretary's appeal from an adverse decision in a similar, though not identical (R. 19), case. Mitchell v. Truck Drivers Local Union No. 299, et al., 191 F. Supp. 229 (E.D. Mich. 1961). When the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit reversed that decision, Goldberg v. Truck Drivers Local Union No. 299, et al., 293 F. 2d 807 (6th Cir. 1961), certiorari denied, 368 U.S. 938 (1961), the court ordered the subpoena enforced. (R. 20, 21).

On appeal to the Court of Appeals, the order of enforcement was first stayed (R. 23) and then affirmed with exception of the required production of "membership files both active and inactive". (R. 24-34, at 33). That part of the subpoena which dealt with membership records was remanded to the District Court for further consideration. (R. 77). The remainder of the subpoena was ordered enforced, but the Court of Appeals withheld issuance of the mandate to allow this Petition to be filed. (R. 76).

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

1. This case presents, in sharp focus, an important question as to the scope of the investigative authority granted to the Secretary of Labor by Section 601(a) of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, 73 Stat. 539, 29 U.S.C. 521(a). That section provides:

> "The Secretary shall have power when he believes it necessary in order to determine whether any person has violated or is about to violate any provision of this Act (except Title I or amendments made by this Act to other statutes) to make an investigation and in connection therewith he may enter such places and inspect such records and accounts and question such persons as he may deem necessary to enable him to determine the facts relative thereto. . . ." (Emphasis supplied.)

Section 601(b), 29 U.S.C. 521(b), imports to the Secretary's investigation the provisions of Sections 49 and 50 of the Federal Trade Commission Act of 1914, 38 Stat. 722, 723, 15 U.S.C. 49, 50. Acting pursuant to authority claimed under Section 601, the Secretary served a subpoena upon the Petitioner which called for all—

> ". . . vouchers, worksheets, audit reports, receipts, minutes of meetings including those of the executive board, applicable resolutions, ledgers, journals, accounts receivable, accounts payable, bank statements, check stubs, cancelled checks, deposit slips, financial statements, records of loans, records of mortgages, records of ownership of property > real and personal, deeds, records of trusts, records of investments, membership files both active and inactive; and surety bonds required under section 502(a) of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, 29 U.S.C. 502(a) and 29 CFR 453, agreements or contracts to purchase such surety bonds and correspondence or documents containing information with regard to such surety bonds"— for a period of 22 months from July 1, 1959 to the date of service. (R. 9). While the face of the subpoena recited that it was issued pursuant to an investigation "involving a determination whether any person has violated or is about to violate" the Act (R. 9), and while the Secretary's petition for enforcement made substantially the same declaration (R. 6), counsel for the Secretary quite candidly conceded in the District Court that the purpose of the subpoena was solely satisfaction of administrative curiosity. The colloquy was as follows:

> "Mr. MacGuineas: . . .
> "The Teamsters Union has filed reports as required by the statute and, with Mr. Williams' gracious permission, I would like to offer those reports so you can see the nature of the information which the Union gives the Secretary.
>
> "The Court: Yes, but as a consequence of the information filed and where the statute says the Secretary shall have the power, when he believes it necessary, to determine whether any person has violated or is about to violate any provision of this Chapter—in other words, an examination of the reports by the Secretary might lead him to conclude there has been a violation of the statute.
>
> "Mr. MacGuineas: No.
> "The Court: Or that the statute has been violated.

"Mr. MacGuineas: No. The question the Secretary has in mind is: Are these reports which the Union has filed in all respects accurate and correct.

"The Court: And nothing in the nature of a criminal proceeding?

"Mr. MacGuineas: No, not at all, Your Honor.

"May I offer, as Petitioner's Exhibit 1, the Union report for the latter half of 1959 and, as Petitioner's Exhibit 2, the Union report for 1960. When Your Honor looks at those reports, you will see that they are quite elaborate and give rather a detailed, complicated picture of the Union's financial operations.

"Now, the Secretary says, 'I want to look at your financial records so I can decide whether or not you have made any mistakes in your reports.' He is not saying, 'I think you have violated the law.' He just says, 'I want to look at your records.'

"The Court: He wants, in other words, to descend to the particular with reference to the general which is represented by the report.

"Mr. MacGuineas: Exactly. He wants to see the financial records which form the basis for the data in the reports. . . .

"The Court: And that is what you say, presumably, is involved here, a curiosity?

"Mr. MacGuineas: The Secretary is curious, exactly." (R. 16-17).

Thus, the Secretary instituted, and the two lower courts countenanced, virtually a complete seizure of several hundred thousand documents (R. 14-15) based solely on curiosity. Mr. Justice Holmes, in 1924, speaking for a unanimous Court in Federal Trade Commission v. American Tobacco Co., 264 U.S. 298, 305-306 (1924), accurately described and condemned such an inquiry:

> "Anyone who respects the spirit as well as the letter of the 4th Amendment would be loath to believe that Congress intended to authorize one of its subordinate agencies to sweep all our traditions into the fire (Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U.S. 447, 479), and to direct fishing expeditions into private papers on the possibility that they may disclose evidence of crime. We do not discuss the question whether it could do so if it tried, as nothing short of the most explicit language would induce us to attribute to Congress that intent. The interruption of business, the possible revelation of trade secrets, and the expense that compliance with the commission's wholesale demand would cause, are the least considerations. It is contrary to the first principles of justice to allow a search through all the respondents' records, relevant or irrelevant, in the hope something will turn up."

Congress has not used "the most explicit language" of the type projected by Mr. Justice Holmes in granting power to the Secretary. Quite the contrary. The language of the Act, when compared with the language in analogous statutes, and when read in light of its legislative history, reveals clearly that Congress placed a limitation upon the Secretary's power. Thus, this case differs from Oklahoma Press Publishing Co. v. Walling, 327 U.S. 186 (1946), in which this Court approved a broad administrative subpoena issued under Section 11(a) of the Fair Labor Standards Act, 52 Stat. 1066, 29 U.S.C. 211(a). That Act gave the Administrator the right, inter alia, to make any investigation "which may aid in the enforcement of the provisions of this chapter" and that was, in the words of the Court, "an instance of 'the most explicit language' which [left] no room for questioning Congress' intent." 327 U.S., at 201. Likewise in United States v.

Morton Salt Co., 338 U.S. 632 (1950), in which this Court sustained an administrative demand of great breadth, even a cursory analysis of the investigative powers of the Federal Trade Commission shows the broadest authority to investigate compliance with antitrust decrees, 38 Stat. 721, 15 U.S.C. 46, and it was in this context in which the subpoena was issued and approved.

The statute in the case presently at Bar, however, presents a sharply different situation. As noted, Congress is well versed in language which can be utilized in granting broad powers of inquiry. Section 11(a) of the Fair Labor Standards Act, 52 Stat. 1066, 29 U.S.C. 211(a), and Section 6(c) of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 38 Stat. 721, 15 U.S.C. 46(c), are but examples. A prime example is found in Section 7602 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, 68A Stat. 901, 26 U.S.C. 7602, in which Congress granted the broadest authority of investigation "for the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of any return. . . .". But, in Section 601 of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, 73 Stat. 539, 29 U.S.C. 521, it is clear that Congress did not empower the Secretary to conduct a full scale inquiry for that purpose. The administrative desire for an audit is not sufficient.

Petitioner does not argue that the Secretary is required to make a showing of "probable cause" prior to the issuance of administrative subpoenas. Such a requirement was specifically deleted from the final draft of the bill. But, at the same time the "probable cause" requirement was deleted, the Congress was careful to differentiate the investigative power granted by this Act from that granted by other statutes.

> "Under nearly every statute requiring the filing of reports, such as the Internal Revenue Act and the Fair Labor Standards Act, the Administrator can conduct 'spot check' investigations unhampered by the 'probable cause' requirement. Our amendment rewrites this section to give the Secretary investigatory power which he believes it necessary in order to determine whether a violation has occured or is about to occur." Senate Report 187, 86th Cong., 1st Sess., p. 91. (Emphasis supplied.)

Thus, recognizing the breadth of powers which previously have been granted, Congress specifically chose to make a more limited grant of authority.[2]

Moreover, in this same Act, Congress has specifically granted the right to members to examine records for the purpose of verifying the accuracy of reports filed with the Secretary.

> "Every labor organization required to submit a report under this title shall make available the information required to be contained in such report

[2] The Secretary declines to accept any such limitation on his power of investigation. Assistant Secretary of Labor John J. Gilhooley, in a speech before the Labor Law Section of the American Bar Association, equated the investigative authority of the Secretary with that of the Internal Revenue Service. 46 L.R.R.M. 48 (1960). The Sixth Circuit went almost as far in equating the authority with that of the Administrator of the Fair Labor Standards Act:

> "We believe Oklahoma Press Publishing Co. v. Walling, 327 U.S. 186, is dispositive of this issue . . . . The Secretary here has the same power as the Administrator." 293 F. 2d 807, at 812, 814.

And the Court below held:

> "We accept and adopt the disposition made by the Sixth Circuit in that case." App. 24a, at 25a.

Petitioner submits all are in error.

> to all of its members, and every such labor organization and its officers shall be under a duty enforceable at the suit of any member of such organization in any State court of competent jurisdiction or in the district court of the United States for the district in which such labor organization maintains its principal office, to permit such member for just cause to examine any books, records, and accounts necessary to verify such report. The court in such action may, in its discretion, in addition to any judgment awarded to the plaintiff or plaintiffs, allow a reasonable attorney's fee to be paid by the defendant, and costs of the action." (Emphasis supplied.) Section 201(c), 73 Stat. 524, 29 U.S.C. 431(c).

Had Congress intended the Secretary to have the power of random investigation to check or verify the reports filed under Section 201, it could have provided that the Secretary have the power "to examine any books, records, and accounts necessary to verify such report."

Congress has, therefore, placed a limitation on the authority of the Secretary to institute investigations. What that limitation is requires specific determination by this Court. It may be that a simple assertion of belief by the Secretary that there is a likelihood of past or prospective violation is sufficient. Such an assertion will, in many cases, be impossible to controvert. But, whatever construction is put on the statute, Congress has made it abundantly clear that satisfaction of official curiosity, under this Act, is insufficient.

For another reason, the whole of the subpoena is fatally defective. An administrative subpoena is valid only if the information sought is reasonably relevant to a valid investigation. But this subpoena, devoid as it is of a specific statement of purpose, provides no gauge by which relevancy could be measured. Administrative curiosity provides no useful test. Nor does the rather nebulous statement that it is issued as part of an investigation to determine "whether any person has violated or is about to violate any provision" of the Act. (R. 9). The Act is a voluminous statute covering many subjects—trusteed subordinate bodies, elections, fiduciary responsibilities, eligibility for office, extortionate picketing, disciplinary action, financial procedures; and numerous penal provisions. It is, in effect, a code of laws governing the internal affairs of labor unions and their relations with others. To state that the purpose of the subpoena is to explore violations of this code of laws is to conceal by mass inclusion.

2. To the extent that the statute in question seeks to regulate internal union affairs bearing no substantial relation to a union's collective bargaining function, and require reporting thereon, the statute goes beyond the reach of federal authority. Generally, record keeping and reporting requirements have been enacted incident to a regulatory scheme properly within the power of Congress. Such requirements in the Fair Labor Standards Act, 52 Stat. 1066, 29 U.S.C. 211(c), the Federal Aviation Act, 72 Stat. 766, 49 U.S.C. 1377(d), the Federal Power Act, 49 Stat. 854, 16 U.S.C. 825(a), the Securities Act, 48 Stat. 897, 15 U.S.C. 78(q), to name but a few, are of this type. So, too, are many of the requirements of Section 201(a) of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, 73 Stat. 524, 29 U.S.C. 431(a). For example, requiring the reporting of strike vote procedures, 29 U.S.C. 431(a)(5)(L), hiring hall practices, 29 U.S.C. 431(a)(5)(M), contract ratification provisions, 29

U.S.C. 431(a)(5)(K), may be supportable as a power ancillary to the unquestioned power to enact laws relating to collective bargaining activities. But, while parts of Section 201(a) may thus meet the test of the commerce clause, Section 201(b) does not. Section 201(b) is an attempt to legislate fiscal responsibility[3] for union officers and, of necessity, is concerned with internal union affairs beyond the regulating powers of Congress.

This case, then, poses the question raised, but left unanswered, in United States v. Five Gambling Devices, 346 U.S. 441 (1953). In that case, indictments

[3] There seems to be no question that that is what Congress has done.

The committee report accompanying S. 1555, the predecessor bill to that enacted, states:

> "Given the maintenance of minimum democratic safeguards and detailed essential information about the union, the individual members are fully competent to regulate union affairs." S. Rep. No. 187 on S. 1555, 86 Cong., 1st Sess., p. 7.

Similarly, Senator Jacob Javits, a member of the Committee on Labor, said with reference to the Act, as it appeared in final form:

> "For example, I think the attention paid by Congress to internal democracy within unions, and incorporated in those sections which deal with the bill of rights, elections, and trusteeships, and the attention being paid by Congress to the need for the higher standards of fiduciary responsibility and for the highest type of public information, which are contained in the sections on reports, are of the greatest importance to the country and the trade union movement." 105 Cong. Rec. 16428-9. (Emphasis supplied.)

And, a Report of the Bureau of Labor-Management Reports, the division within the Department of Labor charged with administering the statute, states boldly:

> "Legislating democracy is an experiment at best, but it seems to be successful." Report of Bureau of Labor-Management Reports, Fiscal Year 1960, pg. 14.

against certain individuals and libels against certain gambling devices charged a violation of 64 Stat. 1134 et seq., 15 U.S.C 1171 et seq., a statute prohibiting the interstate shipment of gambling devices to states where the use of such devices was illegal and requiring dealers in such devices to register annually and to file monthly reports concerning each device sold or delivered. Failure to report was punishable as a crime. Neither the libels nor the indictments alleged that the devices in question had moved in commerce but the government contended that the statute applied without regard to commerce and that Congress, in order to make the prohibition upon *inter*state shipments effective, was empowered to require reporting of *intra*state transactions. The district court sustained a motion to dismiss the indictments on the grounds that the statute was beyond the power of Congress. On direct appeal to this Court, the judgment of dismissal was affirmed. Mr. Justice Jackson, in an opinion joined by Justices Frankfurter and Minton, observed:

> "We do not intimate any ultimate answer to the appellees' constitutional questions other than to observe that they cannot be dismissed as frivolous, nor as unimportant to the nature of our federation. No precedent of this Court sustains the power of Congress to enact legislation penalizing failure to report information concerning acts not shown to be in, or mingled with, or found to effect commerce . . . . Indeed, we find no instance where Congress has attempted under the commerce power to impose reporting duties under penal sanction which would raise the question posed by these proceedings." 346 U.S., at 446.

These three Justices, avoiding the constitutional question, construed the statutory language as applying only to gambling devices shipped in interstate commerce. 346 U.S., at 452. Mr. Justice Black, joined by Mr. Justice Douglas, deeming the statute to be unconstitutionally vague, 346 U.S., at 454, concurred in the result without reaching the commerce question.

The statute in the case at Bar goes far beyond the one which so sharply divided this Court in the Gambling Devices case; for in that case a concededly valid *inter*state ban had been enacted and the *intra*state reporting requirements were defended as necessarily incident thereto. Congress has now "attempted under the commerce power to impose reporting duties under penal sanction." Section 209, 73 Stat. 529, 29 U.S.C. 439.

Section 201(b) of the Act is neither related to interstate expenditures nor limited to matters of a collective bargaining nature. A fair reading of this portion of the Act compels the conclusion that Congress used its conceded power to regulate those affairs of a labor union which are related to collective bargaining, and consequently to commerce, as a springboard for enacting a comprehensive regulation of all internal affairs of such organizations. Laudable as the motive may be, it is beyond the power of Congress.

While Congress has the power constitutionally to regulate activities of a collective bargaining nature, N.L.R.B. v. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., 301 U.S. 1 (1937), Congress lacks the power to go further. This Court recognized that fact in Jones & Laughlin:

> "The authority of the federal government may not be pushed to such an extreme as to destroy the distinction, which the commerce clause itself establishes, between commerce 'among the several states' and the internal concerns of a state. That distinction between what is national and what is local in the activities of commerce is vital to the maintenance of our federal system." 301 U.S., at 30.

Thus, while the power of Congress under the Commerce power may be broad and while Congress may, incidentally, regulate some intrastate activities where necessary to a valid interstate regulation, e.g. Wickard v. Filburn, 317 U.S. 111 (1942), Congress does not have unlimited authority. Here, what Congress has attempted to do is to regulate matters of purely local concern.

The implications of what Congress has done are as clear as they are far-reaching. Labor organizations concededly have an impact upon commerce. But so do business establishments, churches and fraternal organizations. If the existence of such impact, without more, confers federal authority to require detailed financial reports, to impose federal fiduciary standards, to create federal crimes for misuse of funds, to fix terms of office—in short, to treat such oragnizations as creatures of the federal government—then, and only then, can this part of the Act be sustained. To sustain the Act under these circumstances, however, would necessarily "destroy the distinction, which the commerce clause itself establishes". N.L.R.B. v. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., 301 U.S. 1, 30 (1937).

3. To the extent that the subpoena requires the production of records which predate the Act, it is a demand for records which the petitioner is under no obligation to retain. The effective date of the statute in question was September 14, 1959; yet, the subpoena called for the production of records "from July 1, 1959 to the present date . . ." (R. 9). Thus, the Secretary gave a retroactive effect to the statute, one not present in the language of the Act. "Retroac-tivity, even where permissible, is not favored, except on clearest mandate." Claridge Apartments v. Commissioner, 323 U.S. 141, 146 (1944).[1]

It is no answer to say, as did the Secretary and the court below, that the Union has made itself vulnerable to such an inspection by filing its first Section 201(b) report to cover the period from July 1, 1959 to December 31, 1959. Section 201(b) of the Act, 73 Stat. 521, 29 U.S.C. 431(b), requires a labor organization to file annual reports setting forth certain specific information which accurately discloses "its financial condition and operations for its preceding fiscal year". Section 207(b) of the Act, 73 Stat. 529, 29 U.S.C. 437(b), requires that the Section 201(b) report be filed within 90 days after the end of each organization's fiscal year. The fiscal year for the appellant Union coincides with the calendar year. Section 207(b) further provides that any organization which first becomes subject to the Act during its fiscal year, may consider that portion of the year for which it is subject "as the entire fiscal year in making such report". Since the Act became effective on September 14, 1959, the first Section 201(b) report was required to encompass only the period between that date and December 31, 1959, a period of three and one-half months. The preparation of such a report for a three and one-half month period would present burdensome

[1] The court below is the first court to consider this question specifically. Every other decision on the new substantive obligations of the Act has denied it retroactive effect. Smith v. General Truck Drivers Local 467, 181 F. Supp. 14, 18 (S.D. Cal. 1960); Robertson v. Banana Handlers Local 1, 183 F. Supp. 423, 427 (E.D. La. 1960); Local 107 v. Cohen, 182 F. Supp. 608, 612 (E.D. Pa. 1960), affirmed 284 F. 2d 162 (3rd Cir. 1960), certiorari denied 365 U.S. 833 (1961); Flaherty v. McDonald, 183 F. Supp. 300, 304 (S.D. Cal. 1960).

and complex accounting procedures and, in recognition of this, the pertinent regulation provided that the initial Section 201(b) report could be either for three and one-half months or for a longer period. 29 C.F.R. 403.1(b). The appellant reported on a six month basis.

This fact, however, did not give the Secretary the right to inquire into those records which predate the Act. Nor does the Act require the appellant Union to retain such records. Section 206 of the Act, 73 Stat. 529, 29 U.S.C. 436, provides that every person "required to file any report" is to "maintain records on the matters required to be reported" (emphasis supplied) for a period of five years. Appellant was not required to report on matters prior to September 14, 1959, and, thus, is not required to have, and to make, such records available. The fact that it chose to report as it did does not make these records "required" records subject to administrative subpoena.

CONCLUSION

This is a new act of Congress with which we are here dealing. It is an Act no part of which has yet been reviewed by this Court. While analogy may be made to the investigative provisions of other statutes, those acts are of only limited assistance for they involve different purposes, different obligations and vastly different language. Only this Court can with precision lay out the guide lines which are to be followed. Petitioner submits therefore that the petition for a writ of certiorari should be granted.

ARTHUR J. GOLDBERG, Secretary of Labor, Petitioner,

INTERNATIONAL BROTHERHOOD OF TEAMSTERS, ETC.,
Respondent.

Memorandum

This matter came before the Court by way of a petition filed to compel the respondent to attend, testify and produce documentary evidence under the terms of the so-called Labor Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959 (Act of September 14, 1959; 73 Stat. 519 et seq.; 29 U.S.C. 401 et seq.) The Court concludes that the subpoena should be enforced and it is so ordered. Order accordingly. Goldberg v. Truck Drivers' Local Union No. 299, et al. U.S. Court of Appeals, 6th Cir., decided August 16, 1961 and cases therein cited. No. 16693

v.

ARTHUR J. GOLDBERG, SECRETARY OF LABOR, Appellee

Appeal from the United States District Court for the District of Columbia

Decided April 5, 1962

Mr. Edward Bennett Williams, with whom Mr. Raymond B. Kagan was on the brief, for appellant.

Assistant Attorney General William H. Orrick, Jr., with whom Mr. David C. Acheson, United States Attorney, and Messrs. Alan S. Rosenthal and John C. Elfvin, Attorneys, Department of Justice, were on the brief, for appellee. Mr. Donald MacGuineas, Attorney, Department of Justice, also entered an appearance for appellee.

Mr. Robert S. Davidson filed a brief on behalf of The International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders, Blacksmiths, Forgers and Helpers, AFL-CIO, as amicus curiae, urging reversal.

Before WILBUR K. MILLER, Chief Judge, and PRETTYMAN and WILKEY, Circuit Judges.

PRETTYMAN, Circuit Judge: The Secretary of Labor, acting by authority claimed under Section 8(c) of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, sued a subpoena to the appellant union, requiring it to have certain records available at its office for the inspection of representatives of the Secretary. Upon application of the Secretary, the District Court issued an order to show cause why the union should not be required to appear before the Secretary, at such time and place as the court might determine, and there produce the papers specified in the subpoena. After memoranda and argument the court, relying upon Goldberg v. Truck Drivers Local Union No. 299,[2] concluded that the subpoena should be enforced and issued an order to that effect. The union appealed, and this court stayed the effectiveness of the order pending the appeal.

In its brief here the appellant union raised several points. However the Local 299 case involved two subpoenas almost identical with the one now before us, except that they did not specify "membership files" or membership lists, and they called for records for the full calendar year 1959; and the Supreme Court has denied certiorari in that case.[3] We accept and adopt the dispositions made by the Sixth Circuit in that case. We find it necessary to discuss two points raised by our appellant, not covered by the opinion of the Sixth Circuit.

I

The Secretary included in his subpoena a requirement that the union produce, among other documents, "membership files both active and inactive". Both parties assume that by "membership files" the Secretary means lists of individual members.[4] Upon that assumption appellant says (1) that it has no individual members and therefore

---

[2] 293 F.2d 807 (6th Cir. 1961).

[3] 368 U.S. 938 (1961).

[4] Appellant's Br. 28, 30, 31; Appellee's Br. 24. The same assumption appeared throughout the oral argument.

has no such lists, (2) that the Act contains no requirement that it have or maintain such lists, and (3) that even if the union had such lists the Secretary has no statutory authority to require their production.

(1) The Local 299 case, supra, had to do with a local union and so did not concern membership lists of a parent international union. Appellant says, in an attachment to its initial report (under Section 201(a)[5] of the statute) that it does not have any "direct memberships", but consists of an unlimited number of local unions. Its says it does not receive any direct initiation fees, transfer fees, regular dues, or other periodic payments from individual members, but receives its funds from per capita taxes from each affiliated local union. It further says that as a matter of fact it has no lists of the individual members of its affiliated local unions. On oral argument counsel for the union said that the only document resembling a membership list is a subscription list to a publication of the union, but that such list does not purport to be an accurate reflection of the individual membership and does not in fact reflect such membership. Also on oral argument counsel said that the lists of the individual members of the local unions are kept by those unions.

On the other hand the constitution of the appellant union, which appears as Exhibit 1 to the report of the union under Section 201(a) of the Act, provides in Article II, Section 2(a):

> "Any person of good moral character, employed in the craft or the various employments over which this International Union has jurisdiction, shall be eligible to membership in this organization."

And Article XXII of that constitution contains the following:

> "Section 11. Local Union Secretary-Treasurers must pay to the General Secretary-Treasurer forty cents (40c) out of every due collected by the Local Union.

"Section 12. Local Union Secretary-Treasurers must report the names and addresses of all new members coming into the Local Union to the General Office.

"Section 13. Local Union Secretary-Treasurers shall send to the General Secretary-Treasurer a revised list quarterly of the names and addresses of all members in good standing in the Local Union."[6]

Thus a question of fact is presented between the terms of the constitution and appellant's statement of the facts. The matter was not explored in the District Court. However the District Court's disposition of the case reflects an adoption of the version contained in the constitution. This seems to us to have been a reasonable course. At the same time, the eventual program in this very important and delicate field of labor law ought not to rest upon erroneous facts. Therefore we delay our final order in the case for fifteen days to permit the appellant union, if it be so advised, to submit an appropriate motion, as described at the conclusion of this opinion.

(2) As to whether the Act requires the appellant union to have or maintain membership lists, Section 206 provides[7]:

"Every person required to file any report under this title shall maintain records on the matters required to be reported which will provide in sufficient detail the necessary basic information and data from which the documents filed with the Secretary may be

[6] And see, Art. IX, § 3(a) and (b); Art. XIV, § 1(a) and (b); Art. II, § 2(d), last sentence; Art. XVIII, § 13(c). The constitution also provides (Art. VI, § 7(b)): "The Local Union Secretary-Treasurer shall at reasonable intervals provide the Office of the General President with current lists of members in good standing so that they may receive the Journal."

[7] 73 STAT. 529, 29 U.S.C. § 436.

verified, explained or clarified, and checked for accuracy and completeness, and shall include vouchers, worksheets, receipts, and applicable resolutions, and shall keep such records available for examination for a period of not less than five years after the filing of the documents based on the information which they contain."

The reports which this appellant union is required to file are described in Section 201 of the Act. Subsection (a)[8] requires a report which contains, inter alia, the initiation fee required from "a new or transferred member", the regular dues or other periodic payments required to remain a member of the organization, and detailed statements showing the provisions made with respect to qualifications for or restrictions on membership, levying of assessments, participation in insurance or other benefit plans, other financial data, the imposition of fines, suspensions, and expulsions of members, and provisions relating to collective bargaining. Subsection (b) of this Section requires annual reports containing information necessary accurately to disclose the financial condition and operations of the organization for the preceding year. For example, the annual report filed by this union for the year 1960 is on a printed form (LM-2) which contains an item "Dues (or per capita tax)", and the union made an entry in dollars on this item.

The question under the statute, applying Section 206 to Section 201, is whether lists of the individual members of the locals are part of the necessary basic information and data from which the reports filed with the Secretary by the appellant union may be verified, explained or clarified, and checked for accuracy and completeness. This is a question of fact depending upon the terms of the constitution of the appellant union and upon the practices of the union in respect to initiation fees, dues, and the other matters mentioned in Sections 201 and 206. These issues were not included among those tried in the District Court. We therefore cannot resolve them here on this record. The Secretary's position is that a list of the members is necessary in order that the dollar entry in the above-mentioned item may be checked for accuracy. He takes the same position in respect to the necessity of membership lists for the purpose of checking other dollar entries in the reports filed by the union. The union says such lists of members are not necessary for these purposes.

The union says its receipts are from the local unions, but apparently these payments are based upon per capita computations. It would seem that the union itself would have in its files records which are sufficient for it to check the accuracy of the payments transmitted by the local unions.[9] It seems apparent to us that under the statute the Secretary is entitled to inspect such basic data as is reasonably necessary to check the accuracy of dollar entries in the reports. Whether the membership lists are in fact necessary for this purpose, under the methods of operation of this union, is a question of fact. We leave it to the District Court under the conditions outlined at the end of this opinion.

(3) In respect to this contention (13, supra) the appellant union points to the extreme care which Congress has taken in protecting from publication membership lists of unions. For example, in the Conference Report[10] which preceded the adoption of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, the House Managers had the following to say:

> "The substitute agreed upon in conference contains both the provisions of the Senate bill and of the House amendment, except that the provisions from the House amendment are modified to deny candidates the right to copy membership lists and to restrict the right of candidates to inspect such lists to one time within 30 days of the election."

[9] See Art. XXII, §§ 11-13 of the constitution of the union quoted hereinabove.

[10] H. R. Rep. No. 1147 on S. 1555, 86th Cong., 1st Sess. 34 (1959).

The Act itself, in Section 401(c),[1] provides in part:

> "Every bona fide candidate shall have the right, once within 30 days prior to an election of a labor organization in which he is a candidate, to inspect a list containing the names and last known addresses of all members of the labor organization who are subject to a collective bargaining agreement requiring membership therein as a condition of employment, which list shall be maintained and kept at the principal office of such labor organization by a designated official thereof."

The foregoing provision demonstrates, says appellant, that Congress granted only bona fide candidates for office the right to inspect a membership list of a labor organization, and such a candidate had that right only once prior to the election; that his right was only to inspect the list and not to make copies; and that the members whose names the candidate was entitled to see were only those who were subject to a collective bargaining agreement. A membership list such as is described in the last clause, says appellant, would already be in the hands of the employer party to the bargaining agreement and thus would not be confidential to the union. Under the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, says the appellant, the Secretary was authorized to make available to any "interested persons" any information which he is entitled to secure under his subpoena power. Therefore, says appellant, if the Secretary be empowered to require production of membership lists, he would be empowered to destroy the protection which Congress has so substantially given such lists.

We agree with the appellant union that the policy of Congress to protect from disclosure the membership lists of unions is clear. Whatever right the Secretary has to inspect such lists is subject to the limitations of that policy. It may be that the Secretary has a right to inspect, without the right to copy. It may be that summary records which could be checked for accuracy, might be sufficient to satisfy the requirements of Section 208 for "necessary basic information and data" from which the reports can be checked without the necessity of inspecting lists of names and addresses of members. It might be that a court order enforcing the subpoena would contain restrictions upon the Secretary in respect to his reporting to interested persons, or his making public in any manner, any membership lists which he may be entitled to inspect. We think that the framing of a proper enforcement order, under the foregoing considerations, should be by the District Court, if application is made for the consideration of proffered evidence relevant and material to these features of the order.

II

The Act became effective September 14, 1959. Section 207 (b) provides that annual reports shall be filed within ninety days after the end of each fiscal year. But that subsection contains an exception. It provides that, if a person must file a report for only part of a fiscal year, because September 14, 1959, occurs during such person's fiscal year, "such person may consider that portion [of the fiscal year] as the entire fiscal year in making such report." The fiscal year of the appellant union was the calendar year. Since it was thus subject to file a report for only a part of the fiscal year 1959, it was entitled to consider the three and a half months (September 14th December 31st) as its entire fiscal year in making such report. It made its first report for the six-month period July 1, 1959, to December 31, 1959. Although this does not appear to be precisely in accordance with the terms of the statute, the Secretary accepted it as properly filed. In the subpoena here in dispute the Secretary called for the records for the six-month period for which the report was filed. The appellant union says that the statute is not retroactive and that, therefore, even if its records are subject to inspection by the Secretary, the right of inspection does not apply to any records prior to September 14, 1959. The Secretary says that the union chose to file as a report its data for the six-month period and that in order to check the accuracy of such report he deems it necessary to inspect the records for that six-month period. We agree with this position of the Secretary. In the first place, a statute requiring a report to be filed after the statute is enacted, but which report goes back into a prior period for information, is not considered to be a retroactive statute. The prime examples of this are the income tax statutes; the "1918 Act", which required returns for the year 1918, was not enacted until February, 1919; and there are many other examples. In the second place, we agree that it would be impossible to check the report for the six-month period July 1st-December 31st if the inspector had the records for only the three-and-a half-month period September 14th-December 31st.

The essence of the argument of the appellant union is that the statute requires records to be maintained "on the matters required to be reported" (Section 206); that it is "required" by Section 207(b) to file a report for 1959 for only the period September 14th-December 31st; and that therefore it is required to maintain records for only that period September 14th-December 31st. But the statute gives every person rendering this first annual report under Section 201(b) an option to consider that portion of the year as its entire fiscal year for the purpose of making the report, and the statute is specific and without exception as requiring every person filing "any report" to maintain records sufficient to permit the Secretary to verify such report and check it for accuracy and completeness. It seems plain that, when the appellant union chose to file its first annual report for the six-month portion of the year, it assumed the burden imposed by the statute of maintaining the necessary records in respect to the report which it chose to file.

The subpoena in the Local 209 case, supra, required records for the entire calendar year 1959. Neither the District Court nor the Circuit Court of Appeals discussed the point in that case, but the decision of the Court of Appeals was to sustain the subpoena.

In view of the foregoing, on this record we will affirm the order of the District Court, but for the reasons hereinbefore stated we will withhold entry of our judgment for fifteen days to enable the union, if it be so advised, to file in this court a motion to remand the cause to the District Court with leave to the union to file in that court an appropriate motion, praying that the court receive and consider evidence in respect to its "membership files" or its membership lists in accordance with this opinion, and hold such further proceedings as may be appropriate to that motion; provided that in or accompanying its motion in this court the appellant union shall (1) specify the issues raised by it in respect to such files or lists and (2) proffer by description the evidence deemed by it to be relevant and material to the issues thus posed. If the cause is reopened upon remand to the District Court, that court shall make findings of fact and conclusions of law and prepare a suggested appropriate order. In such event the District Court shall report to this court its findings, conclusions, and proposed order. For the purposes of any such remand, if one be directed, this court will retain jurisdiction. If a motion to remand is not filed in this court within the time specified, the order of the District Court, now before us on appeal, enforcing the subpoena without modification, shall stand affirmed and our judgment to that effect will be entered. In no event do we intend that the making of any such motion to remand or any proceedings thereon shall operate to delay or postpone the union's obligation to obey the subpoena forthwith with respect to all items therein named other than membership files or membership lists.

Judgment

This cause came on to be heard on the record on appeal from the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, and was argued by counsel.

On consideration whereof, It is ordered and adjudged by this court that the order of the District Court entered herein dated October 13, 1961, which would require the Union-Respondent (appellant) to appear and produce certain documents pursuant to a subpoena theretofore issued by the Secretary is hereby affirmed except with respect to that portion of the said order which would require the said Union to appear and produce its "membership files active or inactive", as to which matter a separate order is today being entered by this court on the appellant's motion to remand; and

On consideration of appellee's motion for immediate issuance of the mandate in this case and of appellant's opposition thereto, it is ORDERED by the court that the issuance of this judgment to the District Court in lieu of mandate, is hereby stayed to and including June 8, 1962, to permit appellant, if it be so advised, to apply to the Supreme Court of the United States for writ of certiorari.

BRIEF FOR THE RESPONDENT IN OPPOSITION

OPINIONS BELOW

The opinion of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia (R. 20, Pet. App. 1a) is unreported.[1] The opinion of the court of appeals (Pet. App. 2a–12a) is not yet reported.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the court of appeals (Pet. App. 12a) was entered on May 11, 1962. The petition for a writ of certiorari was filed on June 8, 1962. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U.S.C. 1254(1).

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether, as a prerequisite to judicial enforcement of a subpoena duces tecum issued under the provisions of Section 601 of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, 29 U.S.C. (Supp. I) 521, the Secretary of Labor must establish probable cause or some similar basis for believing that the Act has been or is about to be violated, or must assert a belief that the Act has been or is about to be violated.

2. Whether the reporting provisions of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959 are unconstitutional as beyond the power of Congress under the Commerce Clause of the Constitution, Article I, Section 8.

3. Whether, where petitioner elected to file a report for the period July 1, 1959, through December 31, 1959, rather than from September 14, 1959, the effective date of the Act, a subpoena duces tecum for the underlying records for that period had an authorized purpose and met established standards respecting breadth and relevancy.

STATUTES INVOLVED

The reporting provisions of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, 29 U.S.C. (Supp. I) 431, 436, and 521, are set forth in the Appendix, infra, pp. 8–11.

STATEMENT

This action was instituted by the Secretary of Labor following petitioner's refusal to comply with a subpoena duces tecum issued by the Bureau of Labor-Management Reports of the Department of Labor pursuant to the authority conferred by Section 601 of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959 (hereinafter LMRDA), 29 U.S.C. (Supp. I) 521. The background of the action may be summarized as follows:

Section 201 of the LMRDA, infra, pp. 8–10, requires all unions subject to the provisions of the Act to file organizational and annual financial reports with the Secretary of Labor. Section 206, infra, p. 10, provides that every person required to file these reports shall retain for a period of five years "records on the matters required to be reported which will provide in sufficient detail the necessary basic information and data from which the documents filed with the Secretary may be verified, explained or classified, and checked for accuracy and completeness * * *."

Section 601, infra, pp. 10–11, confers authority upon the Secretary "when he believes it necessary in order to determine whether any person has violated or is about to violate" the reporting provisions, "to make an investigation and in connection therewith he may enter such places and inspect such records and accounts and question such persons as he may deem necessary to enable him to determine the facts relative thereto." For this purpose, subsection (b) gives him the same broad subpoena power and sanctions accorded the Federal Trade Commission by Sections 9 and 10 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 15 U.S.C. 49, 50.

Pursuant to Section 201, the petitioner filed in 1959 and 1960 the required reports (R. 16, 17). Although the effective date of the LMRDA was September 14, 1959, the petitioner voluntarily elected to file its first report for the period from July 1, 1959, to December 31, 1959 (R. 18). On May 10, 1961, the subpoena here involved was issued. It identified and called upon petitioner to produce, on May 22, 1961, at petitioner's own office in the District of Columbia, those records which are required by Section 206 of the LMRDA, 29 U.S.C. (Supp. I) 436, to be kept available for five years after the submission of the reports required by the Act (R. 9, 10). The subpoena expressly stated that its issuance was in connection with "an investigation by the Bureau of Labor-Management Reports involving a determination whether any person has violated or is about to violate any provisi of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959" (R. 9).

In a letter dated May 19, 1961, petitioner declined to comply with the subpoena, stating, as one of the grounds for its refusal, that the subpoena could not be validly issued "in the absence of a showing of necessity somewhat akin to a 'probable cause' requirement" (R. 11–12). Following this refusal, the Secretary of Labor on May 26, 1961, pursuant to the provisions of Section 601(b), filed a petition in the district court to compel compliance with the subpoena (R. 4–8). The petition explicitly stated (R. 6, para. V) (emphasis supplied):

> The Secretary, believing it necessary to determine whether respondent has violated or is about to violate Section 201 of the Act, sought through his duly authorized representatives to make an investigation of respondents pursuant to Sections 206 and 601(a) of the Act.

The petition also recited that all of the data sought and referred to in the subpoena were "relevant, material and appropriate to determine whether respondent has violated or is about to violate Section 201 of the Act" (R. 7, para. IX).

Thereafter, the district court, relying principally upon the virtually identical case of Goldberg v. Truck Drivers Local Union No. 299, 293 F. 2d 807 (C.A. 6), certiorari denied, 368 U.S. 938, ordered compliance with the subpoena (R. 21). On appeal, the district court's decision was affirmed, with one qualification. The court of appeals pointed out that the only differences between the subpoena in the instant case and the subpoenas in Goldberg v. Truck Drivers Local Union No. 299, supra, were that the subpoena in this case, unlike those in the Sixth Circuit case, required the production of "membership files," and that the instant subpoena called for records for only one half of the year 1959, whereas the subpoenas in the Sixth Circuit case called for records for the entire calendar year 1959 (Pet. App. 3a). With regard to the portion of the district court's order dealing with membership files, the court of appeals remanded for reconsideration. In all other respects, the district court's order requiring compliance with the subpoena was affirmed (Pet. App. 12a).

ARGUMENT

The only significant difference between this case and Goldberg v. Truck Drivers Local Union No. 299, 293 F. 2d 807 (C.A. 6), in which certiorari was denied, 368 U.S. 938, is that the subpoena here called for "membership files." However, as the court of appeals ordered the district court to reconsider the question whether membership files could be subpoenaed, that issue is not before this Court. Thus, in its present posture, the case is factually the same as Goldberg v. Truck Drivers Local Union No. 299, supra.[2] The legal issues are identical. All of the contentions advanced in the present petition were made by petitioners in the Local Union No. 299 case. The answers set forth in the Secretary's brief in opposition in the Local Union No. 299 case, No. 495, this Term, are equally valid here and establish that the court of appeals was clearly correct in ordering enforcement of those portions of the subpoena which are now before this Court.

[2] The only other difference, as pointed out above, is that the subpoena here sought records from July 1, 1959, whereas the subpoena in Local Union No. 299 sought records for the entire year 1959. This is because the present petitioner chose to use July 1, 1959, as the beginning of its reporting period for filing the required reports under the Act, whereas the petitioners in Local Union No. 299 chose to use January 1, 1959, as the beginning of their reporting periods.

CONCLUSION

It is respectfully submitted that the petition for a writ of certiorari should be denied. It is further requested that action be taken on the petition at this Term. By order of May 11, 1962, the court of appeals granted petitioner's application to stay its mandate pending the filing of a petition for certiorari by June 8, 1962. Under Rule 27(c) of that court, the stay will continue in effect until final disposition of the case by this Court. If the petition is not acted on at this Term, the Secretary's execution of his statutory responsibilities under Section 601 of the LMRDA necessarily will be deferred until at least October.

APPENDIX

Sections 201, 206, and 601 of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, 29 U.S.C. (Supp. I) 431, 436, and 521, provide as follows:

Section 201 (29 U.S.C. (Supp. I) 431). Report of labor organizations.

(a) Adoption and filing of constitution and by-laws; contents of report.

Every labor organization shall adopt a constitution and by laws and shall file a copy thereof with the Secretary, together with a report, signed by its president and secretary or corresponding principal officers, containing the following information—

(1) The name of the labor organization, its mailing address, and any other address at which it maintains its principal office or at which it keeps the records referred to in this subchapter;

(2) the name and title of each of its officers;

(3) the initiation fee or fees required from a new or transferred member and fees for work permits required by the reporting labor organization;

(4) the regular dues or fees or other periodic payments required to remain a member of the reporting labor organization; and of the labor organization, (E) audit of financial transactions of the labor organization, (F) the calling of regular and special meetings, (G) the selection of officers and stewards and of any representatives to other bodies composed of labor organizations' representatives, with a specific statement of the manner in which each officer was elected, appointed, or otherwise selected, (H) discipline or removal of officers or agents for breaches of their trust, (I) imposition of fines, suspensions, and expulsions of members, including the grounds for such action and any provision made for notice, hearing, judgment on the evidence, and appeal procedures, (J) authorization for bargaining demands, (K) ratification of contract terms, (L) authorization for strikes, and (M) issuance of work permits: Any change in the information required by this subsection shall be reported to the Secretary at the time the reporting labor organization files with the Secretary the annual financial report required by subsection (b) of this section.

(b) Annual financial report; filing; contents.

Every labor organization shall file annually with the Secretary a financial report signed by its president and treasurer or corresponding principal officers containing the following information in such detail as may be necessary accurately to disclose its financial condition and operations for its preceding fiscal year—

(1) assets and liabilities at the beginning and end of the fiscal year;

(2) receipts of any kind and the sources thereof;

(3) salary, allowances, and other direct or indirect disbursements (including reimbursed expenses) to each officer and also to each employee who, during such fiscal year, received more than $10,000 in the aggregate from such labor organization and any other labor organization affiliated with it or with which it is affiliated, or which is affiliated with the same national or international labor organization;

(4) direct and indirect loans made to any officer, employee, or member, which aggregated more than $250 during the fiscal year, together with a statement of the purpose, security, if any, and arrangements for repayment;

(5) direct and indirect loans to any business enterprise, together with a statement of the purpose, security, if any, and arrangements for repayment; and

(6) other disbursements made by it including the purposes thereof;

all in such categories as the Secretary may prescribe.

* * * * *

Section 206 (29 U.S.C. (Supp. I) 436). Retention of records.

Every person required to file any report under this subchapter shall maintain records on the matters required to be reported which will provide in sufficient detail the necessary basic information and data from which the documents filed with the Secretary may be verified, explained or classified, and checked for accuracy and completeness, and shall include vouchers, worksheets, receipts, and applicable resolutions, and shall keep such records available for examination for a period of not less than five years after the filing of the documents based on the information which they contain.

* * * * *

Section 601 (49 U.S.C. (Supp. I) 521). Investigations by Secretary; applicability of other laws.

(a) The Secretary shall have power when he believes it necessary in order to determine whether any person has violated or is about to violate any provision of this chapter (except subchapter II of this chapter) to make an investigation and in connection therewith he may enter such places and inspect such records and accounts and question such persons as he may deem necessary to enable him to determine the facts relative thereto. The Secretary may report to interested persons or officials concerning the facts required to be shown in any report required by this chapter and concerning the reasons for failure or refusal to file such a report or any other matter which he deems to be appropriate as a result of such an investigation.

(b) For the purpose of any investigation provided for in this chapter, the provisions of section 49 and 50 of Title 15 (relating to the attendance of witnesses and the production of books, papers, and documents), are made applicable to the jurisdiction, powers, and duties of the Secretary or any officers designated by him.
